

LOYAL LEGION ADDS PRAISE OF LINCOLN

Famous Speakers Extol His Life and Works.

BIG BANQUET AT RAUSCHER'S

Senator Cummins, of Iowa, Says Works of Martyred President Are Still Without Parallel in History of Country—Speaker Cannon Makes Fervent but Impromptu Address.

Surrounded by red, white, and blue flags for which they fought and bled, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the District of Columbia, held its twenty-seventh annual banquet at Rauscher's last night.

Never in the history of the commandery has a more memorable dinner been given. More than 400 men sat at the table and the interest in the occasion was so keen that the balcony was crowded with women who came to watch the scene of festivities.

Abraham Lincoln, his life, and services to the United States, was the burden of the speeches by Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa; Representative James A.
Tawney, of Minnesota; Prof. Frederick M. Davenport, of Colorado. Frequent applause interrupted the speakers, and the sincerity of those present in their tributes to the memory of Abraham Lincoln was manifest.

Tributes Applauded.

Gen. Anson Mills, U. S. A., retired, commander of the District Commandery, acted as toastmaster. The invocation was pronounced by Rev. Dr. George Calvert Carter, rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church. Gen. Mills, in introducing the first speaker, delivered a tribute which was enthusiastically applauded.

He referred to Lincoln as "the greatest of our human kind; the most powerful man for good and evil who has ever existed on the earth." Gen. Mills referred to the fact that the Washington Commandery of the Loyal Legion of the United States was the third in point of membership among the commanderies of the United States. He declared that among the prominent men who had become members through the medium of the Washington commandery were Presidents Arthur, Harrison, and McKinley, to the last of whom he paid a high tribute for the conservative statemanship exhibited during the Spanish-American war.

As Senator Cummins rose to speak a portrait of President Lincoln, illuminated by electric lights, was shown at the rear of the banquet hall, calling forth prolonged applause.

The speaker referred in glowing terms to the tributes which were being spoken all over the United States to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and said that he could imagine no company of men better equipped to appreciate the services of the great Emancipator than those who were present before him.

Life Without Parallel.

"More eulogies," said Senator Cummins,
"have been spoken for Abraham Lincoln than for any man who has ever lived in the United States, with the exception of George Washington. His record for patience, perseverance, compassion, and constructive statesmanship is without parallel in the history of this country." He drew wholly apart from his service to this country, Abraham Lincoln would have been distinguished in any company of historical figures for his greatness of heart and his nobility of mind.

Prolonged applause greeted the speaker as he uttered the sentence: "Abraham Lincoln was the exponent of free institutions among men. We do not yet appreciate the evil effects of that inhuman war, in which 2,700,000 Northern men were enrolled and 350,000 men laid down their lives."

Speaker Cannon, in introducing himself, said that he was asked to make an impromptu address, was greeted with a storm of hand-clapping. He called the distinguished speaker of the House of Representatives, but his address before the veterans was most fervid.
Leaving far over the table, he said:

Made Law Reign.

"Abraham Lincoln was great because he made law reign in the country. His success was due to the fact that he represented a majority of the people, and could subordinate his own prejudices and his rights to the rights of the people. In all his public utterances you will find no word of hate, no word of charity, and no lack of the most complete understanding of the impulses which prompted the actions of the great leader of the common people. Throughout his career he was governed by the principle which he announced on the battle ground of Gettysburg: 'With malice toward none, with charity for all.'" Avoid intense silence on the part of his listeners Mr. Cannon then referred to the politics of the present day:

"When I have passed the border," he said, "the Congressmen who will come to Washington from their districts throughout the United States will have a firmer reliance in the competency of self-government than they ever had before, because Abraham Lincoln has shown the people that they are better today than they have ever been since the ship load of tea was sunk in the harbor of Boston, and the first act of defiance dropped in the face of the rulers of Great Britain."

Influence on Republic.

Representative Tawney spoke on "The Influence of Abraham Lincoln on the future of the Republic." He spoke of his first meeting with the martyred President, when the latter made an address in a high hat and shiny black coat, and said that even then he was to be recognized in his utterances that keen insight in the human nature which afterward won for him the love of the entire nation.
Speaking of the Gettysburg address, Mr.
Tawney said:

"No speech ever delivered will remain longer or exert a more powerful influence than that address. No expression will ever be more cherished by a grateful nation than that of Lincoln's 'Of the people, by the people, for the people.'"

Similar sentiments were expressed by Prof. Davenport and Representative Bonnyea.

One of the most impressive ceremonies was the "trooping of the colors," participated in by Capt. Robert Armour and Capt. Lyman F. W. Cushing. Maj. Huxford, who was in entire charge of the arrangements for the banquet, and to whom credit is due for the success of the event, made a patriotic address, in which he referred to the work of the Loyal Legion. He was freely applauded at the conclusion of his remarks.

The benediction was spoken by Rev.
David H. Buel, chaplain of the organization.

NATION'S HOMAGE PAID TO LINCOLN

In the history of the human race has there been a race of superior intelligence to the Caucasian. We have lived side by side with another race for nearly 200 years, first in slavery and then in freedom. We have uplifted that race, far beyond its dreams, by our association with it. It has made wonderful progress since the closing of the war."

Rev. Dr. J. G. Butler, pastor of the Luther Place Memorial Church, is not only the pastor of the local church, but was chaplain in several Washington hospitals during the civil war. His selection, therefore, as spokesman of the local military was appropriate. He spoke briefly, declaring that nothing did more to strengthen Lincoln than did the united action of the churches of this country.

Former Senator John B. Henderson, a close friend of the war President, vigorously in spite of the many honorable years upon his head, delivered a most noteworthy address, replete with many interesting and interesting anecdotes upon the character and personality of Lincoln. He said, in part:

"If now I am asked why I representing a slave State and myself owning slaves, and yet I am here, I answer, my adoption of a measure of immediate emancipation, my answer is: First, my conscience preferred, and it still prefers, freedom to slavery; and, second, I had heard enough in the Congress and in the army and among the people to satisfy me that the Union, with slavery, had become an impossibility."

Knowledge Developed Faith.

"I believed in Lincoln because I knew him. His rich fund of stories is known to history, and there are still vividly etched upon my memory some of those infectious, humorous ones. On one occasion he referred to a long, lanky fellow with extremely long arms and rather short legs, and said: 'Why, that fellow's arms are so long that he could scratch his shins without stooping.' I think it was his unalloyed gift of humor, and of seeing the bright side of things, that carried him through many a trying crisis."

Mr. Henderson explained in detail the relations existing between Lincoln and his cabinet, notably his War Secretary, Stanton. Every word of his speech was based upon first-hand knowledge and actual experience.

The significant addresses of Justice Wendell Phillips Stafford, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, and of Thomas Nelson Page will be found in another part of this paper.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Nabuco, made an eloquent address. He said, in part:

"Nothing is so beautiful to me in the celebration of this first anniversary of Lincoln as the co-operation of those who represent the noblest spirit of the South."

We do not know what the world will be a hundred years hence, but we know that the world of today is not the world of the year 200. Nations will then be governed by currents of political thought which we can no more anticipate than the seventeenth century could anticipate the political currents of the present century, which will be just as new.

But whether the spirit of authority or that of freedom triumphs, Lincoln's life is a lesson in the unselfishness of motives, and he superintended more than those spirits. And the world is bound more and more to center in this city, which was the exclusive theater of his glory, and which we celebrate as the place of his birth and the place of his martyrdom.

Life Without Parallel.

"More eulogies," said Senator Cummins,
"have been spoken for Abraham Lincoln
than for any man who has ever lived in
George Washington. His record for pa-

Influence on Republic.

first meeting with the martyred President,
when the latter made an address in a

LINCOLN IS LAUDED

Centenary Services Held in His Own Church.

FEW IS DRAPED IN BLACK

Impressive Exercises Held in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, with Son of War President's Attorney General, Lieut. Gen. John C.
Bates, Acting as Presiding Officer.

In the same edifice where he knelt in prayer nearly fifty years ago Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President, was lauded and honored last night.

The New York Avenue Presbyterian Church was the place of worship of President Lincoln when he lived in the Executive Mansion. The same rafters and walls that saw the seamed, careworn face of Lincoln the President last night saw hundreds of veterans who fought for the cause espoused by him, their families, and friends knelt in prayers of thanksgiving and lifted their voices in praise of his great works and rugged character.

Under the auspices of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R., the special centenary services were given a touch of martial coloring that aroused the patriotism of all present and recalled to the veterans the troubles of '61.

Lincoln's Pew Black.

The black outline of the pew occupied by Lincoln stood in bold relief against the rows of light-colored pews. In the great church only the pew of the former President and large likenesses of him, the other pews were dark. All else was draped with the national colors.

So large was the crowd that Capt.
Williams, of the First precinct, and a detail of policemen were on hand. Long before the hour set for beginning the services every seat in the edifice was taken, and many more crowded along the walls in the rear of the pews.

John S. Walker, department commander, G. A. R., issued the call to order. The Woman's Relief Corps went through a flag salute in 1863, and remaining with that institution from that date until its retirement from the Canadian service in 1893, and for a great portion of that period the chief controlling officer of the bank, I cannot resist the desire to thank you for what you have said, and to express my fervent hope that Congress will recognize the merits of the plan you have submitted and adopt it.

You may, perhaps, naturally ask why I speak thus favorably, and preferably, of the certificate system over the pass-book plan. It is of the utmost importance that any system devised for handling savings bank deposits should be simple in its nature, but lending itself to accuracy and economy, and to smooth working in the operations. It is here that the superior merit of the certificate plan lies. For the depositor himself there is as much safety in the certificate (as proposed) as in the pass-book; indeed, I think, more. But as regards economy, there is no comparison. The proposed certificate system being a great simplification of the pass-book system, it is evident that it is so devised that it does away with the whole laborious system of keeping depositors' accounts, and becomes, by its very structure, the account itself, and the depositor himself the moment it is issued, not only the amount of the deposit itself, but likewise the interest to which he is periodically entitled. A more simple, flexible, and safer device than this could not, in my opinion, be created for such a purpose.

The pass-book system is the one adopted by the British post-office department when it established its savings banks in 1861, and which Canada followed in 1863.
It is a system of the most elaborate and complex, and it is so devised that it does away with the whole laborious sys-
the interest to which he is periodically
opinion, be created for such a purpose.

The speaker told of the warm friendship existing between President Lincoln and his father while Edward Bates was Attorney General, the first Cabinet possessed by Lincoln.

Letters of regret were read from Admiral George Dewey, Vice President-elect James S. Sherman, and Vice President Fairbanks.

Dr. Radcliffe's Address.

Rev. Dr. Wallace Radcliffe was the next speaker. He told of the love and respect held by the whole world for Lincoln, and said it was his belief that Lincoln was a great man because he was a good man.

He told of his deep-rooted religious sense, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom. He told of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom, and of his deep devotion to the cause of freedom,
freedom, and of his deep devotion to the
his deep devotion to the cause of freedom,
his deep devotion to the cause of freedom,
